It Declares That the Governor Acted within His Powers in Removing the speriff of kings County on the Charges

ALBANY, June 29,-The Court of Ap--dag affirmed, with costs, the order t the Appellate Division in favor of Nor-8. Dike, in the suit brought by Charles haten to compet Dike to deliver to him the oks and papers belong ng to the office of ff . f Kings county submitted to Him and After a Hearing.

The decision of the highest court upholds Ogeil's action as to his authority. removing Guden from office. The open by Guden was from an order of Appellate Division, Second Depart. ment, reversing an order directing Dike to et as the applicant desired. It brought up question of whether the general wer to remove officers "on charges means charges of some misconduct neglect in office only. The appellant contended that it meant charges of misanduct in office only, and was supported in this view of the case by Justice Gaynor in the first court to which he applied.

Charles Guden, elected Sheriff on Nov. 5, 1901, entered upon his duties on Jan. 1. uez. On Jan. 28 charges against him were made to Gov. Odell end after a earing the Governor removed him from ffice on March 7, appointing Norman S. luke his successor. Of the seven charges preferred the Governor found Guden guilty of but one, which was that October, 1901, he agreed with B Reiss of Brooklyn that in retu return for Reiss's support in gaining his elec-tion to office he would appoint him counsel to the Sheriff. The only evi-ience upon which this charge was based was the testimony of Reiss himself, whom Guden refused to appoint as counsel, enving that he had made the promise His attorneys alleged that Re arges were based on malevolence and ore should not weigh against their

The decision of the Court of Appeals sustaining the Governor and Col. Dike was unanimous. The opinions accompanying the decision were written by Chief Judge Parker and Judge O'Brien. In his opinion Judge Parker said:

In this country the power of removal is an executive power, and in this State it has been vested in the Governor by the people. It does not require argument to persuade the mind that the power thus conferred is executive, not judicial, and that it was intended to be vested exclusively in the Governor. In wisdom the framers of the constitution put the public interest in the foreground, and provided a simple and prompt method of removal of county executive officers by the Governor of the State. The Constitution authorizes the Governor for remove, as we have seen, after giving to such officer a copy of the charges against him and an opportunity of being heard in his defence, and an examination of the record discloses that such requirements cord discloses that such requirements the Constitution were fully compiled with this case.

Therefore we do not examine into the merits, for they do not concern the courts, inasmuch as both the power to decide whether Guden should be removed from the office of Sheriff and the responsibility for a right decision rest solely upon the Governor of the State. The order should be affirmed, with costs,

Judge O'Brien in his concurring opinion

In my opinion the charges in this case ere sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the Governor to remove the Sheriff. In one of the charges presented to him and thich appears in the record, it is, in subtance, alleged that the Sheriff abdicated his convers and duties with respect to the appointment of his subordinates to an irre-ponsible body of men called a patronage committee. That is to say, he entered into a screenent with this committee to make committee. That is to say, he entered into an agreement with this committee to make such appointments of subordinates as it determined upon, and that a list of forty persons was furnished to him by this committee to be appointed as his subordinates and that he appointed them. The charge in substance is that the Sheriff farmed out, to an outside, irresponsible political body the performances of duties which devolved upon himself.

open himself. It was not necessary that the order of removal should specify the particular acts for which the removal was made. The order necessarily includes all acts embraced in the charges and covered by the proofs lost as the general verdict of a jury includes all the facts comprehended in the issue submitted, and the validity of the judgment updeated by the order of removal is not religated by the order of removal is not offered by the circumstance that the Executive instead of specifying the particular sty of misconduct of which the Sheriff was harged and found guilty, expressed his easons in a milder form, namely, that it miscared to his satisfaction that the use-liness of Guden in the office of Sheriff of the is at an end and that he be removed

If Guden does not now vacate the little truden does not now water the interroom in the Court House, which is part of the Sheriff's office, Sheriff Dike will make application to the Sinking Fund Commissomers to have him ousted. This, however, it is thought, will not be necessary, as Guden must be convinced that his offiand the state of the Springarty. a) career, so far at least as the Shrievalty of Kings county is concerned, has been is still a delegate to the Repub-

In spite of the exhibition he made of him-self at the hearing before the Governor, coden scens to have succeeded in retain-ing the confidence and friendship of Dady, who was solely responsible in the first place for his nomination. At the last meeting of the County Committee they occupied adjoining seats on the front bench and wited harmoniously on all the questions which came up. BRITISH NAVY SYSTEM ROTTEN

REAR ADMIRAL BERESFORD SAYS SO IN HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Ships Undermanned and Armament Inferior to Ours Fault of the Politicians -Sir After declaring that the foundations of the Charles Dike and Others Second the Charges - Admiralty's Defence.

> Special Cable Desputch to THE SUN. London, June 20.-During discussion the annual estimates for the navy in the House of Commons to-day, Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, Conservative Member of Parliament for Woolwich, called attention to the defects which, he contends, exist in the British Navy. He admitted that the Government was doing all that it could, but the whole system was, he declared totten. Every increase of the fleet and very improvement effected was the result foutside agitation. He asserted that the engine-room department was thousands of en short of its proper complement. Inefficiency in this and other respects was due to nobody at the Admiralty. The responsibility lay with politicians, who ignored

Lord Charles complained that the Mediterranean fleet was still weak, although it was stronger than last year. It now comprised thirteen battleships, as against ten n 1901, and of these six were vessels of modern type. All the thirteen were ready to go out and fight, while last year there were never more than eight ready to take the sea against an enemy. The torpedo-boat destroyer section of the fleet was double the strength that it was in 1901, while the department of stores was 80 per cent.

This was something toward improvement, for when he was second in command of the Mediterranean fleet he found a difficulty even in getting coal. It was a remarkable thing that officers of the British Army and Navy had habitually to threaten to resign in order to get things put right. His experience in the navy, which extended over forty-three years, had taught him that the Commander-in-Chief of a fleet spent more than half his time writing home for material essential to the efficiency of his squadron.

In regard to reserves they had only 20,000 en instead of the 80,000 that they needed Their armament also was unsatisfactory Both the French and United States navies had better guns than the British.

Lord Charles further said that what he wanted was a "thinking department" at the Admiralty. There should be a general staff to make out the requirements of the case and to present it to the political and financial department. He wanted a business board of the Admiralty separate from hat on which the fighting efficiency of the fleet depended. They needed a reality, not a farce. Control by the Treasury was fatal efficiency.

The great danger to the State in having weak forces had been glaringly illustrated in regard to the army by the campaign in South Africa. He urged strongly that the question of reorganization of the navy needed immediate consideration.

Sir Charles Pilke, member of Parliament for the Forest of Dean division, who has studied and written upon the question f imperial defence, followed in the debate and argued that the expert element should have fuller powers

Mr. William Allan, Member for Gateshead, well known as a marine engineer, declared that the great fleet now assembling at Spithead for the coronation naval parade was short of men, and would, in fact, be manned by skeleton crews. He demanded a thorough reorganization of the

Mr. H. O. Arnold-Forster, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, defended his department from the charges that had been made. He denied that extra coal had been sent to the Mediterranean fleet in consequence of Lord Charles Beresford's threat to resign his command in the fleet. The increase in the coal stores was part of ordinary routine policy of the Admiralty It was an entire delusion to suppose that outside agitation had caused the strengthening of the Mediterranean ficet. The navy was no doubt capable of improvement, but he believed that it was now more efficient than it had ever been before.

and Political Revolution.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUR. Paris, June 20 - Paul de Rousiers, in an article in the Revue de Paris on the ocean trust, points out the causes necessitating a combination to secure economy by regulating the sailings of steamers so as to avoid empty ships, and the conditions resulting from competition and the development of American industries.

M. Rousiers sees in the present grouping he first phase in the creation of an American marine that will be independent of the fluctuations and complications of foreign politics. He considers Mr. Morgan's combination an indispensable complement of the Steel Trust. It will oust all interference between the production of raw material in the United States and the sale of the finished article in Europe and Africa. He says in conclusion:

"With the ocean trust, born of the international organisms of international commerce, is the beginning of a verifiable economical and political revolution.

AMRASSADOR MAYOR AGAIN AT THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

Renews Ills Inquiries as to How Admiral Crowninshieid's Comment on Italian Justice Was Made Public Asks That Those Responsible He Punished and the Views Expressed Repudlated.

Washington, June 20.-Signor Mayor

des Planches, the Italian Ambassador, regards as more serious than was at first supposed the affront into which he has onstrued Rear Admiral Crowninshield's statement that the officers of the United States cruiser Chicago were treated with revoiting indignity" during their c finement in a Venetian prison. The Amsassador, who yesterday brought the matter to the attention of the State and Navy departments, paid a second visit to both places to-day and had interviews with Assistant Secretary of State Hill and Secretary of the Navy Moody. His object was to renew his inquiries as to how the objectionable comment of Admiral Crownenshield obtained publicity and to ascertain Whether any action had been taken to rectify its effect on the public mind. The only information he obtained was that Secretary Moody had sent a telegram to Admiral Crewninshield at Southampton, England, asking for an explanation of the publication of his criticism of the court of inquiry's findings.

Signor Mayor has in his possession a copy of the proceedings at the trial of the Chicago's officers in the municipal court at Venice, and this, he says, utterly refutes Admiral Crowninshield's intimation that the officers were not treated with justice. The main point involved in the diplomatic phase of the incident is the responsibility of the United States Government for the press publication of Admiral Crownin-shield's indorsement. Signor Mayor exdentity regards this as very serious, and he is pressing the State and the Navy De-partments to make amends by assertaining who in the naval service was responsible for the publication and punishing him or them, and also to repudiate the views ex-pressed by Admiral Crowninshield about Italian methods of justice So far only an informal expression of regret over the publication has been made to him, and no additional assurances will probably be given to Signer Mayor or his Government until Admiral Crowninshield's answer to Secretary Moody's inquiry has been

There appears to have been a misunderstanding between Signer Mayor and his Government on the one hand and the State and Navy Departments on the other as to the disposition to be made of Admiral Crowninshield's written review of the Coort of Inquiry's fundings. Signor Mayor understood that this Government would see to it that none of the criticisms of Admiral Crowninshield concerning the treat-ment of the Chicago's officers at Venico would be made public, either here or in Europe, provided the Italian Government would not furnish to the press any state, ment of the proceedings in the Venetian court. The State Department and the court. The State Department and the Navy Department had made an agree-ment that when the record of the Court of Inquiry and Admiral Crowninshield's indorsement were received here no part of them would be furnished to the press, but officers of both Departments disclaim knowleige of any arrangement with the Italian Ambassador or his Government of that

The Navy Department overlooked the possibility that the court's findings an Admiral Crowninshield's comment on their might obtain publicity in Europe, and th fact that this occurred is regarded by the Department as in no wise implicating in the affront which the Italian Ambass for believes has been offered his country done by this Government to make amends for the injury to the feelings of Italy caused by Admiral Crowninshield's reference to "revolting indignity," and the hope i pressed that the affair will not tend to ch the cordial relations between the two

Myers, Baitmore, Ohio, saved by Paine's Celery Compound after the fadures of able physicians, gratefully writes as fellows:

"I suffered for eight years with nervous." "I suffered for eight years with nervou prostrates and the general detairy com-mon to women, and had such pairs in my back that I only not get around the house I used several remedies and consulted sev-eral of the less physicians without obtain-ing any relief. Paine's Celery Compound restored me to health.

stored me to health.
"I also want to say to all mothers that Pane's Celery Connegued is a splendic medicine for their shalling.

Coward For Children.
